

It's not often an inanimate object can be called Smart, but display specialist Rare Basics proves it ain't always the case, with its new mannequin, which was launched at International Display Week earlier this month. The Smart II models pictured are capable of striking 13 different poses and even have two heads. Which, as we all know, are better than one.